

The following paragraph should exclude consulting designees;

Organizations that get ODAs would be expected to surrender a significant number of individual designees. Even those organizations that operate under both ODA and standard certification procedures in the future would need a much smaller number of individual designees. The FAA envisions that the functions most designees employed by the organization perform would be done under the auspices of the ODA system. This is necessary to reduce the FAA's administrative burden associated with managing individual designees.